Market Analysis

ICE arabica coffee futures rose sharply Tuesday on concerns that the wet weather in Brazil would continue to threaten supplies in the market. Broadly, commodities recovered from a two-day sell off triggered by the U.K.'s surprise vote to leave the European Union, as investors were tiptoeing back into risk assets. In the coffee market where consumption has already outstripped supply for three years, some trading houses and brokerages now expect a global supply surplus in the 2016-2017 season as production grows in Central America. ICE September arabica coffee futures gained 3.3% to $1.4060 per pound. September robusta coffee futures settled up $37, at $1,701 per tonne.
